(The following lines from a corres quaint strain of the sentiment, and the curious introduction of was doubtless intended by the author-appear to us one of the he was not longer spared to the world. most felicitous specimens of unique rhyming which has for some time met our eye. The resources of English rhythm for varieties of melody, measure, and sound, producing corresponding diversities of effect, have been thoroughly studied, much more perceived by very few poets in the language.-While the classic tongues, especially the Greek, possess by power of accent, several advantages for versification over our own, chiefly through greater foundance of spondaic feet, we have other and very great advantages of sound by the modern sage of rhyme. Alliteration is nearly the only effect of that kind which the ancients had in common with us. It will be seen that much of the melody of "The Raven" arises from alliteration, and the studious use of similar sounds in unusual places. In regard to its measure, it may be noted that if all the verses were like the second, they might properly be placed I dread it." merely in short lines, producing a not uncommon form ; but the presence in all the others of one line-mostly the second in the verse-which flows continuously, with only an aspirate pause in the middle, like that before the short line in the Sapphic Adonic, while the fifth has at the middle pause no similarity of sound with any part beside, gives the verification an entirely different effect. We could wish the capacities of our noble language, in prosody, were better understood .- [Ed. Am. Review.] Once upon a midnight dreary, while I pondered, weak a

THE LATE DR. GEORGE McCLELLAN .- A thousand anecdotes are related of the late OFFER FOR SALE the balance of the eminent scholar and philanthropist, Dr. Geo. McClellan. The memory of his great talents and goodness lingers like a charm upon the public mind, and hardly a day passes that we do not hear some welcome mention of some ludicrous touches amidst the serious and impressive, as the virtues, coupled with sincere regret that

On one occasion he was called to perform a critical and painful operation upon the mother of his friend, the late Dr R. He came a day before the appointed time.

"Well, George," said the old lady, "will you come to-morrow?"

"Let me see," he hastily replied, "to morrow-I shall be busy to-morrow-must go to New York-great deal to do-how do you feel to-day-must put this operation off I fear."

"Oh I am very thankful," said she, "for "Pooh-it's nothing-work of a moment-

A stranger from the South sent for him to take a tumor from his tongue. He called upon the patient at the U. S. Hotel, and was shown to his room.

"Let me see your tongue," said the surgeon. After a brief inspection he said he would call again, and wished the gentleman good morning, closing the door after him .-In an instant, however, he returned. "Let me look at your tongue once more," he said, and in a moment, the tumor was off.

"What the deuce are you about?" sputtered the patient, with his mouth full of "Merely removing a large tumor," replied the skilful surgeon.

"I won't be operated on to-day!"

"It's off, sir," said the surgeon:

"It is'nt off already, is it? I expected to go through a course of medicine."

"And die under the operation, perhaps," replied McClellan, wishing his patient a very WAR .- Voltaire thus expresses himself on the subject of war:- 'A hundred thousand mad animals, whose heads are covered with hats, advance to kill, or to be killed, by the like number of their fellow mortals covered with turbans. By this strange procedure they want, at best, to decide whether a tract of land to which none of them lays any Stern Despair returned, instead of the sweet Hope he dared claim, shall belong to a certain man whom they call Sultan, or to another whom they call Czar, neither of whom ever saw, or will see, the spot so furiously contended for; and very few of those creatures, who thus mutually butcher each other, ever beheld the animal for whom they cut each other's throat's! From time immemorial this has been the way of mankind almost all over the earth. What an excess of madness is this! and how deservedly might a superior being crush to atoms this earthly ball, the bloody nest of such ridiculous murderers!"

> A GRAMMATICAL PUPIL. - A country pedagogue in the neighborhood of Cuckney, the other day, after giving one of his pupils a sound drubbing for speaking bad grammar, sent him to the other end of the room to inform another boy that he wished to speak to him, and at the same this promising to repeat the dose if he spoke ungrammatically: the youngeter being quite satisfied with what he had got, determined to be exact, and thus addressed his fellow upil: 'There is a common substantive, of the masculine gender, sin-

As the mixture thickens, sweeten with politesse, and season with wit, if you have any, if not, flattery will do, and is very cheap. When all have stewed well for an hour, add some room quite full, and let the scum run off!

CHARITY .- " I fear," said a country curate to his flock. "When I explained to you, in my last charity sermon, that philanthropy in my last charity sermon, that philanthropy was the love of our species, you must have misunderstood me to say specie, which may account for the smallness of the collection.
